A Night Worth the Stress

Since the beginning of high school Erin and Eirini have been waiting for the day that they could go to their prom. This year was the year they had been waiting for. It was finally their chance to attend the night they always looked forward to. However as soon as it began to approach, the both of them realized how much they hate prom and that they no longer wanted to go. Neither of them could find the dresses they wanted, the dates they wanted or even find enough money to cover all the costs that prom comes with. After they both stressed out for months slowly things started to come together. They both found their dream dresses, prom dates and everything else that they worried about began to work out. Getting all dressed up and spending the night with their friends dancing and joking around was worth the previous worry. Although the cost was still crazy, the memories they made were priceless.
