

Halloween

Eirini Boutakis and Erin Dooley dressed as cows for halloween in 2013.

Erin and Eirini get some wood this halloween!

Erin and Eirini take part in a group halloween costume in 2015.

From Farm Animals to Party Animals

For the past three years Eirini and Erin have been dressing in matching halloween costumes. It first started in 2013 when they stumbled upon cow suits the day before Halloween. The following year they dressed up as lumberjacks and finally in 2015 they decided to incorporate a large group of their friends into the tradition and were frat boys. "Ever since we've been doing these crazy costumes, I've loved halloween!" exclaimed Eirini. Who knows what these girls will come up with next year.

Erin and Eirini hug to keep warm while trick or treating.

Erin and Eirini find the perfect balance between work and play.

Erin and Eirini don't need masks this Halloween.

Cows eating cows.

Eirini plays beer pong.

The Aquinas frat boys.

The frat boys pose for a picture with Mr. Ferro.

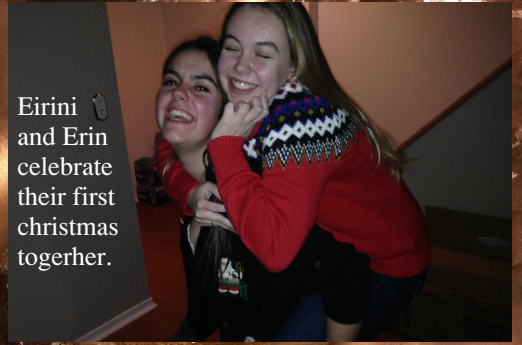

Christmas

Eirini Boutakis and Erin Dooley at the Distillery District in 2013.

Erin and Eirini take pose for a picture with Santa and their friends.

Eirini and Erin celebrate their first Christmas together.

Eirini and Erin ring in the 2016 New Year together.

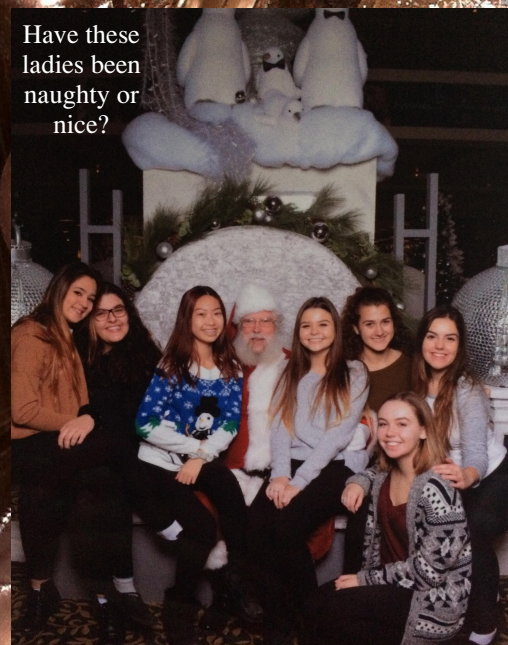

Erin and Eirini at the Distillery District in 2015

Eirini and Erin pose for their annual Christmas card.

Naughty or Nice?

The most wonderful time of the year is spent together by two wonderful friends. Eirini and Erin have a recurring tradition of spending each Christmas together at the Distillery District in Toronto. "I love Christmas! And spending it with my friend makes it ten times better!" exclaimed Eirini. The girls have already made plans to continue these traditions for as long as they both shall live!

Have these ladies been naughty or nice?

Erin, Eirini and their friends pose for a quick picture on crazy sweater day.